Title: Reviving the Iran deal: On Biden attempt to revive JCPOA

The article at hand takes into account the US-Iran Nuclear deal as the author talks about the need for both sides to wrap up this deal as soon as possible. With both Iran and the US remaining stubborn to their demands, it seems as if the situation has reached an impasse.

Even the EU's attempts to revive the deal bore no fruit and the author believes the time is running out for both sides to strike a deal. This is so because presidential elections are on the horizon and there is no assurance that a considerate person like the current President Hassan Rouhani will be elected this time.

The bitter days of Trump's reign have damaged the trust between these two nations and have made Biden's job more difficult. Iran has, time and again, supported the US in its bid to defeat the Taliban. But the US' repeated change of stance has defeated the purpose.

Iran is also going through a rough patch owing to the after-effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. Hence, Iran wants some relief from economic sanctions imposed by the US as well. A deal is a win-win scenario for both parties and diplomacy is the way to move forward.
