Title: Battle of equals: TMC and BJP locked in tense Bengal fight that can go either way

The article at hand talks about the political battle between TMC and BJP that is about to unfold in the upcoming assembly elections in Bengal. The author believes there is a two-sided battle between the two sides and that the results can go either way.

There is a reason why BJP is optimistic ahead of the elections this summer. The party has made significant progress in the state in recent times and even the opposition politicians are now joining the BJP bandwagon.

However, this is becoming a problem because the party's core is unhappy with tickets being given to the newcomers. There have been many instances where the party's old guard has expressed its displeasure. It is also worth noting that BJP's insistence on giving tickets to TMC's former leaders' questions the party's message of progress.

On the other hand, while Mamta Banerjee seems to hold strong against the BJP wave, she needs the support of women voters to emerge victoriously.

Also, it remains to be seen how Muslim voters react to the situation at hand. However, in all this, one thing is clear: a gripping contest is on the cards in Bengal.
