Title: Make it work: DFI is an idea whose time has returned. India needs a big infra push

The article at hand talks about the Union Government's new initiative to set up development financial institutions (DFI) as the author advocates the idea while also exploring various aspects related to it.

The author believes infrastructure development can be India's gateway to growth and the current shortage of it has been pegging our country back. There was a time when these DFIs were in fashion but for some reason they went out of it.

However, the author believes in times like these, financial markets are not advanced enough to meet all the development needs. Hence, DFI is needed to fill this gap via government support.

However, the challenge lies in the decision making of DFI in these uncertain times. Since the pandemic, the world has moved to digital means and hence, the DFI needs to build infrastructure that bodes well with this change.
