Sri Lanka declares Economic Emergency to contain Inflation

- The President of Sri Lanka Gotabaya Rajapaksa had declared an economic emergency due to rapidly depleting forex reserves, depreciating currency, and rising food prices in the country.
- The emergency was declared under the Public Security Ordinance to prevent the hoarding of essential items, including sugar and rice.

Reasons for Sri Lankan Economic Crisis:

- Sri Lanka during the COVID-19 pandemic suffered a severe setback in its tourism industry which contributes to over 10 percent of the country’s Gross Domestic Product (GDP) and brings in foreign exchange.
- Due to the depletion in the forex reserves, the country had to increase the amount of money to purchase the foreign exchange to import goods. This increase has led to the depreciation of the Sri Lankan rupee by approximately 8 percent so far in 2021.

Measures Taken Under Economic Emergency Crisis:

- The government has appointed a former Army General as Commissioner of essential services who is authorized to seize food stocks held by traders and retailers and regulate their prices.
