Direction: In this section you have a short passage. After this passage, you will find some items based on the passage. First, read the passage and answer the items based on it. You are required to select your answers based on the contents of the passage and opinion of the author only.

If your actions inspire others to dream more, learn more, do more and become more, you are a leader. Leadership is the ability to work with those who are different from us and the capacity to monitor our own personal or professional development needs while having the requisite self-confidence that makes leaders stand out. Leadership is not just doing the right things; instead it is doing things right. Even when you want to do something yourself, letting others do it because they wanted to, is a sure sign of good leadership. The key aspect of leadership is influence, not authority. It is best cultivated by example, which inspires others. Scriptural wisdom demands that a good leader first become a good servant, because the way up points down. The glamour of position doesn't matter as much as energy, passion and empathy.

###COMMON###6###8###Direction: In this section, you have two short passages. Read the passages and answer the items that follow. You are required to select your answers based on the contents of the passage and opinion of the author only.

I was beginning to tire a little now. I had been cutting steps continuously for two hours, and Tenzing, too, was moving very slowly. As I chipped steps around still another corner, I wondered rather dully just how long we could keep it up. Our original zest had now quite gone and it was turning more into a grim struggle. I then realized that the ridge ahead, instead of still monotonously rising, now dropped sharply away, and far below I could see the North Col and Rongbuk glacier. I looked to see a narrow ridge running up to a snowy summit. A few more whacks of the ice-axe in the firm snow and we stood on top.

- D. A long ridge

7. 'I had been cutting steps continuously for two hours' suggests

- A. the climber was unskilled in the art of making steps
- B. he had to cut the steps out of snow before climbing up which was necessarily a slow process
- C. the slowness was caused by the fact that as soon as he cut the steps they were again covered with snow
- D. he had to work suspended from a ledge

8. 'It was turning more into a grim struggle' would mean

- A. that after the long exertion he was feeling so weak that any further climbing meant a hard struggle with the force of nature
- B. that Tenzing was making the task more difficult
- C. that strong cold wind was pushing him down from above and that he had to struggle with the forces of nature
- D. that he was in a mood to give up ultimately

###COMMON###9###13###Direction: In this section you have a short passage. After the passage, you will find some items based on the passage. First read the passage and then answer the items based on it. You are required to select your answers based on the contents of the passage and opinion of the author only.

Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability. Their chief use for delight, is in privateness and retiring; for ornament, is in discourse; and for ability, is in the judgment, and disposition of business. For expert men can execute, and perhaps judge of particulars, one by one; but the general counsels, and the plots and marshalling of affairs, come best from those that are learned. To spend too much time in studies is sloth; to use them too much for ornament, is affectation; to make judgement wholly by their rules, is the humor of a scholar. They perfect nature, and are perfected by experience: for natural abilities are like natural plants, that need pruning, by study; and studies themselves do give forth directions too much at large, except they be bounded in by experience. Crafty men condemn studies, simple men admire them, and wise men use them; for they teach not their own use; but that is a wisdom without them, and above them, won by observation. Read not to contradict and confute; nor to believe and take for granted; nor to find talk and discourse; but to weigh and consider.

The dog is a very intelligent animal and it can be trained for many duties. Some dogs work with the police and the army as sentries and trackers, and there are medals that are awarded to dogs for bravery in action. Other dogs act as seeing-eyes for the blind, and some breeds are specially trained for rescue work among mountains and snow. Jobs like herding sheep and cattle and guarding homes are also done by them. Whenever man lives and works in the Arctic Circle, in the desert, in the jungle, in the moors or mountains, the dog is his faithful companion and help. A common mongrel may possess these qualities just as much as the aristocratic bloodhound.

###COMMON###78###82###Direction: Read the passage and answer the questions according to the information given in the passage Thomas Harris' latest novel is being hailed as the long awaited sequel to The Silence of the Lambs, but I have never thought that novel actually needed one. It stood on its own, finished and complete. After I put that book down I did not think to ask what Hannibal was going to do next. In my opinion he had done enough. I've always preferred a novel that concludes with a few loose ends because, in life, not all problems get tied up nice and neat. There was something so frightening, so giddily uncomfortable about knowing that Hannibal "The Cannibal" was loose on an unsuspecting world. Author Harris did readers a favor by letting us all keep a little of that fear in our hearts and minds for the past 11 years. But we became so intrigued by Hannibal, didn't we? And we wanted to see more of him. When we first met him in Harris's second novel Red Dragon, he was a small but important player, giving reluctant but brilliant insights into the mind of a serial killer to FBI agent Will Graham. In The Silence of the Lambs it was FBI cadet Clarice Starling looking for a multiple murderer and Lecter became a major and integral part of the story. And when we saw Hannibal brought to life by Anthony Hopkins in the 1991 film, we became hooked. Rarely before had we been drawn to such an evil character — one who charmed and hypnotized us with his combination of verbal gymnastics, Old World manners and awesome intellectual abilities.

But now there is Hannibal, Harris's latest novel, and this time Dr. Hannibal Lecter is the player. And like The Silence of the Lambs, Hannibal is finished and complete and stands on its own. Quite well in fact.

In Hannibal, Harris plumbs the shadowy depths of Lecter's mind and throws us into the stinking oubliette of his psyche, taking us through past — and possibly significant — remembrances. When we re-ascend, it is with a startling array of knowledge about the man. We find him fascinating, sympathetic and — despite his dietary habits and penchant for killing (and consuming) only the "rude" — a likable character. I like the well rounded character that Harris has created, even if he's somewhat outlandish, flamboyant and deeply disturbed. Hannibal loves the finer things in life: classical music, ancient literature, fine art, a tidy evisceration...

The novel's title works, not only because it is about Hannibal; it is Hannibal. And though the narration is in the third person, it speaks with his voice. It's a voice of culture and intelligence; of terror and menace. In hushed conspiratorial tones, it politely invites us to witness acts of inhuman horror and suffering. Almost — almost — making them palatable. And if not palatable, then so fascinating we find it hard to turn away. Harris does not write of these atrocities from the moral standpoint of someone who thinks the things Hannibal does are wrong; we all know what he does is wrong. Even Hannibal knows very well what he does is wrong. He also believes he has the intellectual and moral superiority to justify his actions, and this is Harris's triumph in the narration. We are shown things in the way Hannibal would see them through his intellectually superior and amoral eyes, and it is up to us to decide the right or wrongness of things. We also see things with an almost clinically unprejudiced and sometimes uncomfortably uncensored eye; unwavering, unblinking. Harris's prose is elegant and economic. ###DONE###

78. Why does the writer think that the title of the novel Hannibal works?

- A. The title aptly captures the most important aspect of the book.
- B. The author's writing style embodies characteristics of Hannibal's personality.
- C. The author's narrative is through the eyes of the protagonist himself and leaves moralistic judgement to the reader.
- D. The novel is as if it were though a narration by Hannibal himself which enables the reader to understand that Hannibal only attacks the rude.
- E. None of the above

79. Which of the following is admitted by the author in the passage?

- A. Hannibal's actions are morally wrong.
- B. Anthony Hopkins' portrayal of Hannibal increased the popularity of the series and compelled the author to write another book.
- C. A character with intellectual superiority and old world manners can be fascinating even if evil.
- D. Peeping into the mind of Hannibal makes the novel 'Hannibal' a much more interesting read than 'Silence of the lambs'
- E. None of the above

80. Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

- A. The fact that readers find a dangerous character like Hannibal fascinating reveals that morality is no longer popular with people.
- B. Harris had revealed enough fascinating details about Hannibal's past in the earlier novels prior to warrant a third book on the same character.
- C. Hannibal's love for the finer things in life makes him a fascinating character.
- D. Hannibal evokes sympathy from the readers due to his turbulent past, which has made him engage in horrific deeds
- E. None of the above

81. Why, according to the author, did 'Silence of the Lambs' not require a sequel?

- A. The character of Hannibal Lecter had been explored completely in the book.
- B. The book had a few loose ends and a sequel could effectively tie these up.
- C. The author preferred the ambiguity at the end of the story about

Hannibal's actions and whereabouts.

D. The story in the book was complete and finished

E. None of the above

Anthropology is the systematic study of humanity, with the goal of understanding our evolutionary origins, our distinctiveness as a species, and the great diversity in our forms of social existence across the world and through time. Anthropology is divided into four subfields: sociocultural, biological, archaeology, and linguistic anthropology.

Sociocultural anthropologists interpret the content of particular cultures, explain variation among cultures, and study processes of cultural change and social transformation. Sociocultural anthropologists conduct research on most areas of the world, focusing on topics that include: human ecology; gender relations; culture and ideology; demography and family systems; race, class and gender inequality; resistance movements; colonialism, neo-colonialism, and development; and cultural politics in the West.

Biological anthropologists study a variety of aspects of human evolutionary biology. Some examine fossils and apply their observations to understanding human evolution; others compare morphological, biochemical and physiological adaptations of living humans to their environments; still others observe behaviour of nonhuman primates (monkeys and apes) to understand the roots of human behaviour.

Archaeologists study the material remains of present and past cultural systems to understand the technical, social and political organization of those systems and the larger culture evolutionary process that stand behind them.

Linguistic anthropologists study the ways people communicate across the globe. They are interested in how language is linked to how we see the world and how we relate to each other. This can mean looking at how language works in all its different forms, and how it changes over time.

It's a staple of the British diet and a popular choice for a quick and easy lunch. But new research reveals the carbon footprint of the humble sandwich could be fuelling harmful greenhouse emissions. The worst offender is revealed as the ready-made "all-day breakfast" sandwich, crammed with egg, bacon and sausage. Researchers at the University of Manchester carried out the first-ever study of the carbon footprint of sandwiches – both home-made and ready-made. The study found a home-made ham and cheese sandwich could have the lowest carbon footprint, depending on the recipe. The study also found that making your own sandwiches could reduce carbon emissions by half compared to shop-bought versions. Keeping sandwiches chilled in supermarkets and shops also adds to their carbon footprint, accounting for up to a quarter of their greenhouse gas emission equivalent. ###DONE###

###COMMON###187###191###Direction: Given below is a short passage. After the passage, you will find some items based on the passage. First, read a passage and answer the items based on it. You are required to select your answers based on the contents of the passage and opinion of the author only.

Over-population is the most pressing of India's numerous and multi-faceted problems. In fact it has caused equally complex problems such as poverty, under-nourishment, unemployment and excessive fragmentation of land. Indisputably, this country has been facing a population explosion of crisis dimensions. It has largely diluted the fruits of the remarkable economic progress that the nation has made during the last four decades or so. The entire battle against poverty is thwarted by the rapid increase in the population. The tragedy is that while over-population accentuates poverty, the country's stark poverty itself is in many areas a major cause of over-population. ###DONE###

187. What is the irony behind the over-population of India?

- A. Over-population gives birth to poverty, which (poverty) itself is the cause of over-population
- B. Under nourishment and unemployment are outcomes of flawed economic progress
