

Ahom Dynasty

Chaolung Sukaphaa, the first Ahom monarch, crossed the Patkai mountainous region to reach the Brahmaputra valley. His 3 queens, two sons, and a retinue of nobles, bureaucrats, and warriors accompanied him. On December 2, 1228, Sukaphaa arrived in modern-day Namrup and resided in the area along the Burhidihing River's south bank. This was when the foundations of the Ahom Dynasty were laid.

Chaolung Sukaphaa established his capital at the Charaideo and made friends with the indigenous Barahi and Marans tribes. The title Chaolung is attached to him because of his role in Assamese history. Sukaphaa died in 1268, having set the foundations for a powerful sovereign empire.

Ahom Dynasty Expansion

The technology Sukaphaa and his followers had acquired was shared with the region's residents. This technology was wet rice farming, which increased the region's agricultural output. The Ahom style of life and government gradually absorbed other people in the region, such as the Barahi, resulting in a large increase in the population. The process of absorption lasted until the 16th century when the Ahom Empire grew large enough to welcome other ethnic groups.

In 1615, the Ahom Dynasty would engage in its first significant conflict with an imperial force, the Mughal Empire. The Mughals conquered the Ahom capital of Garhgaon in 1662 but were defeated in later battles. Finally, during the battle of Saraighat in 1671, the Ahoms led by Lachit Borphukan successfully repelled a strong Mughal assault, extending their borders westward to the Manas River. By 1682, the Mughal influence in the region would be completely eradicated.

First King of Ahom Dynasty: Chaolung Sukaphaa

Chaolung Sukaphaa was the first king of the mighty Ahom Kingdom, who founded the Ahom kingdom. Sukaphaa is widely referred to as the architect of "Bor Asom" or "Greater Assam". According to the evidences provided in the book 'A History of Assam', by Sir Edward Gait, it is widely recognized that Chaolung Sukaphaa left a place called Maulungin AD 1215 with eight nobles and army men. In 1215 AD, Sukaphaa, with his men settled in Charaideo in upper Assam. Charaideo was the first small principality that sowed the seeds of the further expansion of the Ahom Empire.

Ahom Kings List

The Ahom Dynasty ruled for nearly 600 years and were well known for showing great resistance to the mighty Mughals for their expansion into the north-east. During the nearly 600 years reign of the Ahom Dynasty, more than forty rulers ruled. Below is the list of the mighty rulers that ruled the Ahom Kingdom:

Ahom King	Reign (in AD)
Sukaphaa	1228–1268

Suteuphaa	1268–1281
Subinphaa	1281–1293
Sukhaangphaa	1293–1332
Sukhrangpha	1332–1364
Interregnum	1364–1369
Sutuphaa	1369–1376
Interregnum	1376–1380
Tyao Khamti	1380–1389
Interregnum	1389–1397
Sudangphaa	1397–1407
Sujangphaa	1407–1422
Suphakphaa	1422–1439
Susenphaa	1439–1488
Suhenphaa	1488–1493

Supimphaa	1493–1497
Suhungmung	1497–1539
Suklenmung	1539–1552
Sukhaamphaa	1552–1603
Susenghphaa	1603–1641
Suramphaa	1641–1644
Sutingphaa	1644–1648
Sutamla	1648–1663
Supangmung	1663–1670
Sunyatphaa	1670–1672
Suklamphaa	1672–1674
Suhung	1674–1675
Gobar Roja	1675–1675
Sujinphaa	1675–1677
Sudoiphaa	1677–1679

Sulikphaa	1679–1681
Supatphaa	1681–1696
Sukhrungphaa	1696–1714
Sutanphaa	1714–1744
Sunenphaa	1744–1751
Suremphaa	1751–1769
Sunyeophaa	1769–1780
Suhitpangphaa	1780–1795
Suklingphaa	1795–1811
Sudingphaa	1811–1818
Purandar Singha	1818–1819
Chandrakanta Singha	1819–1821
Jogeswar Singha	1821–1822
Purandar Singha	1833–1838

Ahom Kingdom: Economy

The Paik system was crucial to the Ahom Dynasty's economy. In this arrangement, able-bodied adult males known as paiks were required to serve the state and constitute the state's militia in exchange for land.

Suklenmung was the first to introduce coinage in the 16th century, while the Paik system was still in place. During Ahom's advance into the Mughal territory, the income systems it encountered were altered to fit its needs.

Ahom Dynasty: Administration Structure

The administrative structure of the Ahom Empire was as follows:

- Swargadeo- The empire was controlled by the Swargadeo, who had to be descended from the same family as the first king Sukaphaa. In most cases, succession was by primogeniture, but if the situation required it, another descendent of Sukaphaa may be chosen to the throne of the great Gohains.
- Royal Offices- Under Pratapa Singha's reign, two new royal offices, the Borbaru and Borphukan, were created. The Borbaru was the military and judicial leader of the Swargadeo, whereas the Borphukan was a military officer who served as a form of Viceroy to the Swargadeo's western lands. Lachit Borphukan was the most renowned of the latter.
- Patra Mantris: The Council of Ministers, also known as Patra Mantris, comprised five important roles. They gave the king advice on crucial state matters.

Decline of the Ahom Dynasty

The Tungkhungia kings, the final Ahom Dynasty rulers, would come to power near the end of the 17th century. Their reign was marked by advances in the arts and architecture, as well as internal struggles that shook their foundations.

The Moamoria revolt, which was cast aside by British soldiers, characterized the latter portion of their reign. However, it did not succeed in ending the conflict. Internal turmoil, emigration, and attack by Burmese tribes all contributed to the kingdom's demise. The Ahom Dynasty eventually fell under the power of the British Empire after the Treaty of Yandabo in 1826.